“ Uncle Charles was always ready with a warm hug and a hearty greeting. I loved to hear him laugh and typically found myself laughing right along with him. More than once during a rather lengthy discussion at a family gathering, my mind wandered and he brought me back to the conversation by asking, “Did I lose you there?” My thought was always that he wouldn’t notice my inattention because there were several others in the discussion. However, he could quite capably hold forth and monitor attentiveness of everyone in the group simultaneously. I always appreciated that he was interested in me and my family and no matter the length of time between our visits, he always remembered our last chat and wanted an update. Rest In Peace, Uncle Charles. Your reward awaits you in glory.
