“ I used to stop in and see Uncle Charles and Aunt Nita (Anita) when I would have trips taking me through DFW. If my layover was short, I'd always call and just chat to catch up. They were both always warm, gracious, and welcoming. I recall more than one occasion over dinner or breakfast if I stayed over, having a discussion with Charles on social issues, the bible, love, and science. We didn't always agree but we could see reason in the others point of view. He had a dry sense of humor that I appreciated, and his laugh was always full. He often remarked on how proud he was of his kids, how he missed Robert, how he wished Blenda was closer (and she did move closer), and how happy he was to have Chuck and his family. He loved how brave and adventurous Blenda was to be out traveling the world, living around the country, and taking on new positions for work. He loved how strong and dedicated Chuck was to family and career, and how he was appreciated for his skills at work. He loved his family. I remember Christmas at Grandmother's, butchering hogs in the fall, him yelling at us all to stop running in the house at Henderson and go outside to play. I'm lucky to have been able to call him Uncle and friend. He was kind, funny, and loved.
