My beautiful sister was the epitome of kindness and self sacrifice. When I was a child she brushed my hair and tied my shoes to get me ready for school while our mother was making lunches for us. When I turned 73 last October she called me to say she always thought of me as a “little girl.” Her last words to me last Sunday before she was wheeled into surgery were, “You all take care of each other.” (meaning her siblings who are left, Johnnie, Mike, Ronnie and me). She was always taking care of us. Sleep in peace, Mary, until the resurrection.
